THE Subregiber returns his sincere thanks THE Subreriber returns his sincere thanks to his friends for the very liberal patronage which he received during the two two months he has been in the business. He has sold his constitutory establishment to Messen Resea & Zellers, gentlemen whom he takes pleasure in recommending as being well qualified and desarrying the patronage heretofore conterred upon him.

Those injected to me in cash or book account, will be expected to settle at once, in order that I may meet my obligations to others. I will be found at the alone from 3 to 11, and from 2 to 50 chock during each day until the 1st of November.

W. H. BUCKE.

PROM the above it will be seen that we have become proprietors of Mr. Bucke's well anowa confectioners establishment, corner of Main and Second streets, bayton, Ohlo, where we hope to receive the amount of patronage that Mr. Bucke cajoyed, and as much more as our friends was see proper to allow mr. Nothing shall lack on our part to make our establishment all that it should be. Our ice Gream and cooling orthweshall be of the best; at all times our stock of cancious toys, facey goods, musical instruments, dec., shall always be complete—nothing shall be wanting on our part to make our establishment what it should be.

INDIAN SUMMER

There is a time, just when the frost Prepares to pave old Winter's away, When Astumn is a reverie lost, The mellow daytime dreams away. When Summer comes, in musing mind To gase once more on bill and dell, To muck how many sinsaves they bind And see if all are ripened well.

With balony breath she whispers ow, The dying dowers look up and give Their awartest incense ere they go For her who made their beauties live She entern 'coath the woodland's shade Her sephyre lift the lingering leaf, And bear it gently where are laid. The loved and lost ones of its grief.

At last old Antumn, rising, takes Again his sceptre and his throne.
With buisterous hand the tree he shakes,
Intent on gathering all his own.
Sweet Summer, sighing, flies the plain,
And waiting Autumn, guant and grim,
Sees miser Autumn hoard his grain,
And smiles to think it's all for him.

The blood leaves the surface, and ruckes to the castral organs with contenter violence. Like the Chita. But in this effort it fulls. Then the Faves rotions, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expet the criticality poison through the other great surrectory—the skin. In this also it falls, and the system abandous the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of the strength to repeat the hopoless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxystus of Faven Andalon. Such countintional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed. We have labored to find, and have found, an antifote.

Fever and Agne.

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and atimulates the liver to expel it from the heaty. As it should, so it does eare this artifletive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the gyttem as it is absorbed, and thus keeps these who use it tree from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only enres, but projects from, the greet variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Durnb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, at Biltons Headache, Billons Evern, Neuralpis, Rheumattsm, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Farache, Catarria, Asthma, Palphations, Palphat, Affections of the Spicou, Hystorica, Colle, Bundysis, and Palarhi Affections of the Securate in Howels, all of which, when arising from this cutter, will be found to assume more or less the internation of these deranguments, and cures the disease. This it accomplishes by stimulating the exceptions to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this teste office of their own second. Henne arises
